Residential, residential dementia, nursing, palliative and short-stay care in Didsbury

The care home where life flourishes

Set in the lively and friendly neighbourhood of Didsbury, Laurel Court is perfectly placed near local shops, cafés, and scenic spots.

With a bus stop right outside and the train station just a short walk away, it's easy for both residents and families to stay connected to each other and everything the area has to offer.

Inside, the home is thoughtfully arranged into four individual households, designed to meet different levels of care for up to 91 residents. These include a dedicated nursing household, a residential space for those living with dementia, and two blended households. Each floor features shared kitchenettes where residents can enjoy light meals or a cup of tea, and the ground floor offers direct access to the garden - ideal for a breath of fresh air or a peaceful moment outdoors.

A truly amazing care home where my Mother and now my Father received/receive an outstanding level of care. All the staff (carers, managers, admin, domestic, chaplains, and caretakers) are friendly, approachable, professional, and supportive. They go above and beyond the call of duty.

Gardens that bring joy

The garden is a much-loved spot where everyone can unwind and spend time in the fresh air. Just a short stroll from the main reception, this beautifully landscaped space features colourful flowers, raised beds, and plenty of seating for relaxing.

Many residents enjoy getting involved in planting and tending to the allotments, adding their own touch to the garden throughout the seasons. For those on the upper floors, balconies offer a peaceful place to sit and take in views of the lively surroundings below.

Adding to the charm of the space are Lily and Dolly, the home's two friendly cats, who are often found exploring the garden or curling up nearby. Whether it's a sunny afternoon chat or a quiet moment with a cup of tea, the garden is a place that brings people together in a calm, uplifting setting.

The garden is such a lovely spot - it's great to see residents enjoying the outdoors, whether it's relaxing on the patio or planting in the raised beds.

Dining that delights

Mealtimes here are more than just food on a plate - they're about comfort, flavour, and a few surprises along the way. With a wonderfully diverse kitchen team, the menu's got a bit of everything: think hearty roast dinners, fragrant chicken biryani, and proper Jamaican curries that pack a punch.

Everything's cooked fresh, using great ingredients, and there's always plenty to go around. Residents have a real say in what's served too, thanks to monthly menu meetings where favourite dishes (and strong opinions!) take centre stage.

Baking days are a treat - literally. The smell of freshly made cakes and biscuits wafting through the dining areas is enough to get everyone smiling.

Support that speaks for itself

Care here is all about the individual, what matters to each person, how they like things done, and what helps them feel most at home. Whether someone needs nursing care, dementia support, or a short-term stay, everything is tailored with warmth and attention.

Each household is designed to feel like its own little community, with familiar staff who take the time to really get to know everyone. Many team members have been here since day one, which means strong bonds and a real sense of trust between residents, families, and carers.

Support goes beyond the day-to-day, too. For those who want it, spiritual care is always available, with regular chaplain visits and a local Catholic priest offering comfort and connection. It's all part of creating a place where people feel safe, supported, and truly cared for - every step of the way.

They go above and beyond the call of duty to provide my parents and our family the care and support to meet our needs and more. We are so very, very grateful.

Living later life well

When you think of a care home, what springs to mind?

Life here is anything but dull. Activities are shaped around what residents love - whether that's getting creative, staying active, or simply soaking up the good vibes.

Music plays a big part in daily life, with not one but two pianos ready for impromptu performances from residents and carers alike. The much-loved "Laurel Court's Got Talent" show, always brings out hidden stars (and a few laughs).

Creativity flows in other ways too - sewing, crafts and activities tailored to those living with dementia.

And when it comes to celebrating, no occasion is too small. From colourful Diwali festivities to laid-back Hawaiian parties, there's always something to look forward to.

It's all about making life joyful, meaningful, and just the right amount of fun - one moment, one memory, and one piano key at a time.

Residents are treated as human beings, and the care for each is tailored to their specific needs. The staff liaise with relatives and welcome them into the home and even let them join in the activities put on for the residents.
